Here is my interview/podcast (in Marathi) on the recent stock market crash following the announcement of the Claude Cowork Legal plugin. It also covers career conversations in the age of AI automation. 🎙️ 🤖 📉

https://lnkd.in/dMs7Q5b9

Some of the points we discussed include:

➡️ How powerful is Claude Cowork really? Does it have the potential to disrupt the global and Indian software industries? If yes, what exactly makes it so capable?

➡️ Every time a new AI engine arrives, people say the software industry is over. How much of this is fearmongering, and what is the real risk to the industry?

➡️ The US stock market saw a major impact. With relatively affordable labor available in India, is the Indian software industry truly at risk?

➡️ People say "coding is gone, but thinking is on." What does that really mean? Have we actually learned how to think?

➡️ Have our education systems, software, and AI capabilities evolved with the changing world?

➡️ Are mid-level professionals more worried about losing their jobs and careers? What should they do?

➡️ Will AI go beyond human control? What does it signal when AI chatbots have their own social media presence?

Thanks to Vinayak Pachalag and his team for hosting me! 🙌
