OpenAI APIs can be quite expensive, especially when working on projects like building Autonomous AI Agents with Microsoft's AutoGen. These projects often make multiple API calls internally, which can add up quickly.

But what if I told you there's a cost-effective alternative? You can replace OpenAI API calls with calls from local Open Source Large Language Models (LLMs), and the best part is, they are absolutely free!

I've written a more detailed article on how to do this, and you can find it here: https://lnkd.in/dPYfhGtF
